What game do we play? Which book do we choose?

When books become our best game

It is not necessary to explain too much to children to convince them to play. Play is a self-gratifying and motivating activity; it is the engine of all kinds of learning: ...tactile, visual, symbolic, linguistic and cognitive. And it is thanks to learning through play that many of us, from the very beginning, have acquired knowledge, skills and even values in a natural way, without artifice. We could also add another no less important virtue: it has allowed us to acquire these elements without pressure, without haste, at our natural pace of learning.

For this reason, in the publishing world we are intensely involved in generating playful proposals in the form of books, which accompany the process of children's growth in an entertaining and creative way.

When we are interested in exploring the world around us, we want books to cuddle, bit and shake ... Just take a look at Touch & Feel: Animals by Mar Benegas, a perfect sensory journey for the little ones.

When we are able to use our imagination, we like to recreate situations and invent stories with characters; even objects acquire a symbolic value. For this moment we have prepared Good Morning, Dudús! by Patricia Geis, which allows us to play with these cute characters: wake them up, dress them, clean them and accompany them to the school.

When we can understand strategies and follow more complex narrative threads, we can find a book to count and discount with Wow! What a Hole! by Mar Benegas.

At this point, we would also like to share one of Combel's great news, and that is that we are launching a new series: Rob & Ot, a new literary universe created by Jaume Copons and Lilita Fortuny, ideal for guiding the first reader, who begins to walk unaided, among characters with whom they can identify and imaginary worlds in which to have fun.

And speaking of fun, we can accompany Mario, who in his disarray does not know how to dress himself, in a dizzying fashion show: you only have to open the door of A Quirky Wardrobe and you will see! Surprise and laughter are guaranteed.

When we have a choice and we are looking for stories that move us, the picture book is the best option. In our catalogue you will find infallible proposals: from the classics You and I and All I Know about the Poop to the Amazing Creepy Houses lift-the-flap books by the tandem Martí Salomó.

We cannot fail to mention Bad Name by Bel Olid, whose illustrator Nadia Mazzenga has just been awarded the Junceda 2024 Prize, or Disoncerting Stories, by Oriol Garcia Molsosa and Mercè Galí, selected as a shortlisted work in the 9-year-old category of the Atrapallibres Prize.

And true to our aim of transmitting ecological values to our youngsters, The Leap of the Frog by Teresa Franquesa is a complete reflection on the current situation of planet Earth and a song of hope for us to react in time and take the necessary leap when a change of course is called for.

Because learning is an adventure!

As a summary of this approach to our proposal as a way to stimulus for children's growth through books, we have the collection of activity books called Shall we Play Reading?, which offers reading and writing activities adapted to the 4 to 7 age group, to promote reading comprehension, symbolic association and problem solving related to language, always in a playful tone and with cheerful illustrations that will captivate them.

Because playing is the natural way to learn!

Shall we Play Reading?

This series arose from the need to provide parents with tools in the wake of the PISA 2022 results and the dramatic fall in reading scores across OECD countries.

As we all know, learning to read can be hard work for young learners. It is probably one of the most complex processes we perform throughout our lives. That's why it is essential to have a good predisposition for reading.

Shall We Play Reading? propose reading comprehension activities with a high playful component. Each title has a theme as a common thread to awake the curiosity of the little ones and a character that guides them. Through play, children will relate, discard, complete, classify and order to improve their reading comprehension. In addition, they will find challenges throughout the workbooks to solve and contribute to creating a final map.

The Leap of the Frog

A new book from EcoSphere to help young readers understanding why the Earth is warming and what we can do about it.

The boiled frog syndrome, as an analog, is often used to describe what happens when a problem develops so slowly that its damage is not easily perceived immediately and this lack of awareness results in no or delayed reactions to prevent or reverse the damage it causes. We are now aware that the premise is false.

But we, as the frog, can take a hopeful leap towards a better future. Because we are still in time to react and tackle climate change. Quisicosas takes a fresh look at everyday objects. Playing with the shapes of a potty and a pencil, each book allows young children to explore, use their perception skills and make sense of the world around them. While guessing which are the possible uses of such ordinary objects, the books work on vocabulary, creativity, teamwork and empathy. Thus a potty is transformed into a cooking plate, a hat or a sailing boat. A pencil becomes a flower and space rocket or containers for precious things. In the end, the little seekers will find out which is their most common use!

I am as Hungry as a Dragon!

With the structure of a chained story telling, this lift-the-flap book with pop-ups plays with the saying that the big fish always eat small fish.

Using simple rhyme, Marta Benegas combines fun riddles with paper engineering and the amazing illustrations of Anna Süßbauer. It starts with a frog who eats one mosquito from Quito and keeps telling a daring hyperbolic story of the animal food chain spread by spread. At the end, a huge dragon swallows them all, turns the book into coal until the tale... is done!

The Amazing Creepy Granny House

Meritxell Martí and Xavier Salomó have created a not-too-spooky lift-the-flap book that promises hours of entertainment for the little ones.

This title shares the memorable story of a grandson visiting her granny to spend a very special evening together. To his surprise, when the kid arrives in the old Victorian style house, there is note for him: a mouth-watering snack awaits in the kitchen.

After having a delicious eye-popping chocolate smoothy, the young boy chases the kitten room by room until dusk. By the time the full-moon is coming, the big date approaches and so does the a punchy dénouement that gives a unique twist on the haunted house cliché.

Readers will love exploring the rooms, guessing what is beneath each flap and finding details and surprises hidden on every page.

The Amazing Creepy Grandpa House

Further to the success of The Amazing Creepy Granny House, here comes another amazing lift the flap book by Meritxell Martí and Xavier Salomó.

Once upon a time there was a retired pirate who lived in a strange old house on top of a rock. On the ground floor: an empty tavern. And in the basement, barrels of old rum and secret creepy passages. With the help of his granddaughter, they will sail against all odds to find a precious treasure.

In broad outline, that would be the plot. But don't be misled, this is much more than a book. It is a treasure hunt. It is also a pirate ship to live amazing adventures.

The story is packed with nods to classics such as Treasure Island, The Adventures of Baron Munchausen, Andersen's The Little Mermaid, Salgari's The Black Corsair and many more. If your little ones love adventure and pirate stories, this is one of a kind!

Earthlings: Prehistory

Six million years ago the Earth was shaken by a sudden climate change. The lush forests of Africa became savannahs. Primates, who until then lived in the trees, learned to live on the ground and to walk on two legs in order to be able to stand in the undergrowth and see into the distance. They learned to think, to invent, to communicate, to imagine; they became human. Equipped with stone tools and mastering the fire, they set out to travel the world.

Seeing the world through the eyes of a child can be fun. But sometimes can be scary, too. This boy is scared of getting lost, of being alone in the forest, of fantastic creatures, but the most terrifying is his fear of the dark. Not only to darkness itself; but also the imagined dangers concealed by darkness... He is not alone. His dad is afraid of bank's letters, his mom of horror movies, his pet of a scary cat.
